dcrc GlobaLense: A Journal of Social Science Research

Theme: 'National Education Policy: Politics, Prospects and Possibilities'

ABSTRACT

Since the first National Policy on Education 1968 formulated by Kothari Commission, we have come a long way to a recently announced National Education Policy 2020. The education paradigm of India has grappled with various issues of language, integrated primary education, skill oriented vocational education and quality based higher education and the overall transformative effect of education to reap the benefits of demographic dividend. The recent shift to digital education to adapt to the externalities triggered by the worldwide pandemic of COVID-19 has also paved the way for new prospects and its challenges. This issue of dcrc GlobaLense seeks to probe the various dimensions of the national education policy, its historical trajectory, adaptability and reorienting nature to fulfil the basic right to education across all sections of society.
